I found this image on a real estate website. I am obsessed with looking for the answer to my life on real estate web sites. I also find and collect photographs like this. I could see this picture very large on a gallery wall somewhere in Chelsea.

This tool was created to expose where your data travels to and from every day. By visiting websites, you send and request data, knowledge, and sometimes ideas across the geopolitical world almost instantaneously. This sending & receiving allows us to do amazing things, but also puts us under the 'super-jurisdiction' of the states we send/receive to/from. The notion that our physical location is equivalent to the jurisdiction in which we can be prosecuted has been proved obsolete by the U.S. DOJ^[1], and knowing where our virtual selves travel is more important than ever.

data (/ˈdeɪtə/ day-tə, /ˈdætə/ da-tə, or /ˈdɑːtə/ dah-tə)[1] is a set of values of qualitative or quantitative variables; restated, pieces of data are individual pieces of information. Data is measured, collected and reported, and analyzed, whereupon it can be visualized using graphs or images.

Data as an abstract concept can be viewed as the lowest level of abstraction, from which information and then knowledge are derived.

Raw data, i.e., unprocessed data, refers to a collection of numbers, characters and is a relative term; data processing commonly occurs by stages, and the "processed data" from one stage may be considered the "raw data" of the next.

Field data refers to raw data that is collected in an uncontrolled field environment. Experimental data refers to data that is generated within the context of a scientific investigation by observation and recording.

The word "data" used to be considered as the plural of "datum" but now is generally used in the singular, as a mass noun.[2]
